

We left church not God

The institution of the church, intended as a spiritual sanctuary, has been tragically exploited by some to serve as a cloak for nefarious activities. Rather than being bastions of morality and compassion, certain churches have become breeding grounds for corruption, power abuse, and financial impropriety. These institutions, meant to foster spiritual growth, have instead become platforms for personal enrichment and political manipulation. The sacred trust bestowed upon religious leaders has been violated, as they divert tithes and offerings into private coffers, while neglecting the pressing needs of their congregation. Furthermore, some churches have strayed from their core mission, becoming entangled in secular affairs and promoting divisive rhetoric, rather than fostering unity and love. Such actions not only erode the public's trust in religious institutions but also hinder the genuine spiritual growth of believers. It is imperative to differentiate between the true essence of religion and the corrupt practices of its representatives, to safeguard the sanctity of faith and restore the church's role as a beacon of hope and compassion.

As death toll mounts in Kenya church, local clergy wonder at scale of indoctrination

Most of the exhumed bodies have been children's, but the extreme indoctrination of their parents has shocked clerics and religious analysts.

The suspected sex pest, blue-pilled boomer, was elected into office.

The endemic ignorance in the rural millennials is where we must focus next, and it begins with breaking the unholy marriage between corrupt churches and crooked politicians.

The most positive thing about COVID19 was the muting of modern churches.

Modern churches preach noise, stand for nothing and have no religious philosophy.

The most hateful and pretentious people are the ones with Biblical quotes on their profiles.

A country with more fringe churches than industries is a doomed country.

It is a country where citizens rely on mobile loans from predatory lenders and shylocks to put food on their tables.

But seriously, how crooked politicians are dishing out millions to churches when Kenya is struggling with debt still baffles me.

These wicked politicians are doing this with utter contempt because they know the President is aloof and weak.
